

1956
IN THE SUPREME COURT OF CANADA

(ON APPEAL FROM THE COURT OF APPEAL FOR BRITISH COLUMBIA)

BETWEEN:

THE LAW SOCIETY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

APPELLANT
(RESPONDENT)

AND:

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

APPELLANT
(RESPONDENT)

SERVED COPY SIGNIFICATION

AND:

MARK DAVID ANDREWS

RESPONDENT
(PETITIONER)

AND:

GOREL ELIZABETH KINERSLY

RESPONDENT

AND:

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF ALBERTA, THE ATTORNEY
GENERAL OF SASKATCHEWAN, THE ATTORNEY GENERAL
OF ONTARIO, PROCUREUR GENERAL DE LA PROVINCE
DE QUEBEC

INTERVENORS

---

FACTUM OF THE APPELLANT, THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

---

ATTORNEY GENERAL OF
BRITISH COLUMBIA
Legal Services Branch
5th Flr., 609 Broughton St.
Victoria, B.C. V8V 1X4
Solicitors for the Appellant,
the Attorney General of
British Columbia

BURKE-ROBERTSON, CHADWICK
& RITCHIE
Barristers and Solicitors
1800 - 130 Albert St.
Ottawa, Ontario K1P 5G4
Ottawa Agents for the Appellant
the Attorney General of
British Columbia

JOSEPH J. ARVAY, ESQ.      COUNSEL

(For names of counsel and intervenors see inside cover page)

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF CANADA

(ON APPEAL FROM THE COURT OF APPEAL FOR BRITISH COLUMBIA)

BETWEEN:

THE LAW SOCIETY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

APPELLANT
(RESPONDENT)

AND:

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

APPELLANT
(RESPONDENT)

AND:

MARK DAVID ANDREWS

RESPONDENT
(PETITIONER)

AND:

GOREL ELIZABETH KINERSLY

RESPONDENT

AND:

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF ALBERTA, THE ATTORNEY
GENERAL OF SASKATCHEWAN, THE ATTORNEY GENERAL
OF ONTARIO, PROCUREUR GENERAL DE LA PROVINCE
DE QUEBEC

INTERVENORS

---

FACTUM OF THE APPELLANT, THE
ATTORNEY GENERAL OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

---

ATTORNEY GENERAL OF
BRITISH COLUMBIA
Legal Services Branch
5th Flr., 609 Broughton St.
Victoria, B.C. V8V 1X4
Solicitors for the Appellant,
the Attorney General of
British Columbia

BURKE-ROBERTSON, CHADWICK
& RITCHIE
Barristers and Solicitors
1800 - 130 Albert St.
Ottawa, Ontario K1P 5G4
Ottawa Agents for the Appellant
the Attorney General of
British Columbia

JOSEPH J. ARVAY, ESQ.      COUNSEL

(For names of counsel and intervenors see inside cover page)

(Names of Counsel and Intervenors)

DAVIS & COMPANY
Barristers and Solicitors
2800 - 666 Burrard St.
Vancouver, B.C. V6C 2Z7
Solicitors for the Appellant,
the Law Society of
British Columbia

D.W. SHAW, ESQ. Q.C.            COUNSEL

RUSSELL & DUMOULIN
Barristers and Solicitors
17th Flr., 1075 W. Georgia St.
Vancouver, B.C. V6E 3G2
Solicitors for the Respondent

D.G. DOWPER, ESQ.            COUNSEL

ATTORNEY GENERAL OF ALBERTA

OSLER, HOSKIN & HARCOURT
Barristers and Solicitors
1400 - 50 O'Connor St.
Ottawa, Ontario K1P 6L2
Ottawa Agents for the Appellant
the Law Society of British Columbia

SCOTT & AYLEN
Barristers and Solicitors
1200 - 170 Laurier Ave. N.
Ottawa, Ontario K1P 5V5
Ottawa Agents for the Respondent

GOWLING & HENDERSON
Barristers and Solicitors
160 Elgin St.
Ottawa, Ontario K1N 8S3
Ottawa Agents for the Attorney
General of Alberta

ATTORNEY GENERAL OF SASKATCHEWAN

GOWLING & HENDERSON
Barristers and Solicitors
160 Elgin St.
Ottawa, Ontario K1N 8S3
Ottawa Agents for the Attorney
General of Alberta

ATTORNEY GENERAL OF ONTARIO

SOLOWAY, WRIGHT, HOUSTON,
GREENBERG, O'GRADY, MORIN
Barristers and Solicitors
99 Metcalfe Street
Ottawa, Ontario K1P 6L7
Ottawa Agents for the Attorney
General of Ontario

PROCUREUR GENERAL DE LA PROVINCE DE QUEBEC

NOEL, DECARY, AUBRY & ASSOCIATES
Barristers and Solicitors
111 Champlain Street
Hull, Quebec J8X 3R1
Agents for the Procureur
General de la Province
de Quebec

I N D E X

	PAGE NO(S)
PART I
Statement of Facts	1
PART II
Points In Issue	2
PART III
Argument	3
PART IV
Nature of Order Sought	36
PART V
List Of Authorities	37

1.

PART I

STATEMENT OF FACTS

1. The Appellant, the Attorney General of British Columbia, accepts the facts set out in the Factum of the Appellant, the Law Society of British Columbia.

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

PART II

POINTS IN ISSUE

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

1. Does the Canadian citizenship requirement to be a lawyer in the Province of British Columbia as set out in s. 42 of the Barristers and Solicitors Act, R.S.B.C. 1979, c. 26, infringe or deny the rights guaranteed by s. 15(1) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms?

2. If the Canadian citizenship requirement to be a lawyer in the Province of British Columbia as set out in s. 42 of the Barristers and Solicitors Act, R.S.B.C. 1979, c. 26, infringes or denies the rights guaranteed by s. 15(1) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, is it justified by s. 1 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms?

3.

PART III

ARGUMENT

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

1. The Appellant, the Attorney General of British Columbia, agrees generally with the approach to s. 15 of the Charter adopted by the British Columbia Court of Appeal. It is submitted, however, that the Court of Appeal erred in concluding that the Respondent had discharged his onus of proving that the citizenship requirement in s. 42 of the Barristers and Solicitors Act was unreasonable or unfair and therefore in violation of s. 15 of the Charter.

2. Section 15 applies to both the administration of the law ("equality before the law") and to the content of the law ("equality under the law"). This interpretation is consistent with the "explanatory note" which accompanied the final draft of s. 15 when it was tabled in the House of Commons: see Elliott, "Interpretating The Charter - Use of The Earlier Versions As An Aid" (1982), U.B.C. L. Rev. 11 @ 38. Professor Elliott says (@ p. 17) that the explanatory note suggests "that the phrase 'equal before and under the law' is intended to describe not the scope of the right to equality as such, but the spheres of governmental activity

4.

1 to which the right to equality can be applied".
2
3

4
5 3. The right guaranteed in s. 15 is "the right to equal
6 protection and equal benefit of the law [both in its 7 administration and content] without discrimination".
8
9

10
11 4. The phrases "equal protection and benefit" and 12 "without discrimination" are "interacting expressions,
13 colouring each other ... and hence to be considered together
14 as a compendious expression of a norm.": Miller et al v. The 15 Queen, [1977] 2 S.C.R. 680 @ 690. These phrases capture two 16 essential elements of the norm of equality guaranteed in 17 s. 15. A law violates s. 15 because of the choice of 18 certain criteria upon which a burden is imposed or a benefit
19 is bestowed and the unreasonableness or unfairness of that 20 criteria given the purpose of the law.
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34

35 5. The Court of Appeal's inquiry was similarly in two 36 steps. The Court first considered whether the criteria of 37 "citizenship" was "capable of falling with s. 15": Case, p.
38 104 and concluded that it was "a potential ground of 39 discrimination under s. 15": Case, p. 105. The Court of 40 Appeal then considered the "ultimate question": Case, p.
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

5.

1 103, which asked whether this criteria was "unreasonable or
2 unfair": Case, pp. 103, 105. This requirement that the
3 criteria must be reasonable is also implicit in the aphorism
4 that those who are "similarly situated be similarly
5 treated": Case, pp. 96-97.
6
7
8
9
10
11
12

13 6. There are not an infinite kind of criteria which 14 might be discriminatory. Rather, the criteria enumerated in 15 s. 15 of the Charter are illustrative, albeit not 16 exhaustive, of the kinds of criteria that might be 17 discriminatory. Any law which classifies on one of the 18 enumerated grounds or on grounds similar thereto, these 19 triggers s. 15 scrutiny. Such law must then pass the test
20 of reasonableness as articulated by the Court of Appeal.
21 Conversely, a law which classifies neither on the enumerated
22 grounds nor on grounds akin thereto does not pass this 23 threshold test in s. 15 and therefore the Court need not and 24 ought not scrutinize the reasonableness or fairness of the 25 legislative classification.
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40

41 7. This analytical approach to s. 15 was expressly
42 adopted in three recent decisions of the British Columbia
43 Supreme Court: Scott v. A.G.B.C., [1986] 5 W.W.R. 207; 44
45
46
47

1 A.G.B.C. v. Husband Prov. J. and Page (1986) 4 B.C.L.R. (2d)
2
3 295 and Beltz v. Law Society of B.C., [1986] 1 W.W.R. 427 @
4
5 437. Indeed in: B.C.T.F. et al v. A.G.B.C. et al, [1987] 1
6
7 W.W.R. 527 @ 535 the B.C. Court of Appeal suggested that the 8
9 enumerated grounds may, in fact, be exhaustive. And in Milk
10
11 Board v. Clearview Dairy (Unreported B.C.C.A., Mar. 4, 1987, 12
13 Reg. No. CA005312), the B.C. Court of Appeal rejected the 14
15 s. 15 claim brought by a corporation on the ground, inter
16
17 alia, that "a corporation has no race, national or ethnic 18
19 origin, colour, religion, sex, age, mental or physical 20
21 disability nor any other comparable quality". (emphasis
22
23 added) See, however Wilson and Maxson v. Medical Services
24
25 Commission of B.C. et al, [1987] 3 W.W.R. 48 @ 83
26
27 (B.C.S.C.) where this "threshold test" was not applied.
28
29
30

31 8. It is submitted that the purpose of s. 15 was to 32
33 constitutionalize the values that found protection and were 34
35 enhanced by human rights legislation enacted by the 36
37 provincial Legislatures and the federal Parliament as well
38
39 as by states pursuant to international law - all of which 40
41 provide the historical and philosophical basis for s. 15.
42
43 The grounds enumerated in s. 15 are similar to those that 44
45 are specifically included and prohibited in such human 46
47 rights (or anti-discrimination) legislation or conventions,

i all of which have a "closed list" of such prohibited
2 grounds. (See e.g. Human Rights Act, S.B.C. 1984, c. 22,
3 the Newfoundland Human Rights Code, R. S. Nfld. 1974, c. 22;
4
5 Human Rights Code, S.P.E.I. 1968, c. 2, Human Rights Act,
6
7 S.M. 1974, c. H175; Saskatchewan Human Rights Code, R.S.S.
8
9 1978, c. S-24.1, Ontario Human Rights Code, R.S.O. 1980, c.
10
11 340, Human Rights Act, S.N.S. 1969, c. ; Alberta Bill of 12
13 Rights, S.A. 1972, c. A-16; Charter of Human Rights and 14
15 Freedoms, R.S.Q. 1977, c. C-12; Human Rights Act, S.N.B.
16
17 1971, c. 8); the European Convention for the Protection of 18
19 Human Rights and Freedoms, Article 14; Universal Declaration
20
21 of Human Rights, Article 2; The International Covenant on 22
23 Civil and Political Rights, 1966, Article 2; Quebec Charter
24
25 of Rights and Freedoms, R.S.Q. 1977, c-C-12; The 26
27 International Convention of the Elimination of All Forms of 28
29 Racial Discrimination, 660 U.N.T.S. 195; The International 30
31 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination
32
33 Against Women, UNGRA Res. 34/180, GAOR, 34th Sess., 34
35 Supp. 46, p. 193; ILM 33, Article 1; I.L.O Convention
36
37 Concerning Discrimination in Respect of Employment and 38
39 Occupation (No. 111), 362 U.N.T.S. 31, Article 1(a), (not 40
41 yet ratified by Canada).
42
43
44
45
46
47

1 9. Tarnopolsky in Discrimination and The Law (1982) @
2
3 840 summarizes his review of the Canadian legislation:
4

5 "To reiterate, the various anti-discrimination
6 statutes in Canada prohibit specific actions
7 taken 'because of' certain specified grounds and 8 thereby provide illustrations of what is 9 'discrimination' against someone."
10

11
12
13 10. Like human rights legislation, s. 15 will 14 likely be interpreted to prohibit both direct and indirect
15 discrimination on the enumerated grounds and grounds akin 16 thereto.
17
18

19
20
21 Reference: Ontario Human Rights Commission and O'Malley
22 v. Simpson Sears (1965), 64 N.R. 161 (S.C.C.)
23
24 Re Blainey and Ontario Hockey Association et al
25 (1986), 54 O.R. (2d) 513 (Ont. C.A.)
26
27
28

29 11. It is significant that although the 14th Amendment
30 of the U.S. Constitution does not have a "without 31 discrimination" clause, the U.S. Supreme Court has, with 32 rare exceptions, found violations of the 14th Amendment only 33 when there have been legislative classifications similar to 34 the enumerated grounds in s. 15. All other classifications
35 have been subjected to what is called the "mere rationality 36 test" and such classifications have nearly always been held 37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

1 valid. There is, in effect, "minimal scrutiny in theory and
2
3 virtually none in fact": G. Guenther, "Forward: In Search of 4
5 Evolving Doctrine on a Changing Court: A Model for New Equal
6
7 Protection", (1982) 86 Harv. L. Rev. 1 @ 8: W. Cohen,
8
9 Federalism in Equality Clothing: A Comment on Metropolitan 10
11 Life Insurance Co. v. Ward (1985), 38 Stan. L. Rev. 1.
12
13
14

15 12. This approach to s. 15 does not "limit the effect of 16
17 that guarantee to the law as it stood before [its]
18
19 adoption": Alberta Union of Provincial Employees et al v.
20
21 Attorney General of Alberta (Unreported S.C.C., April 9, 22
23 1987, p. 14, per McIntyre, J.), and yet it is a construction
24
25 consistent with "the nature, history, traditions, and social 26
27 philosophies of our society": Alberta Union of Provincial 28
29 Employees, supra, @ p. 14.

30
31 See also: Cromer v. B.C.T.F., [1986] 4 B.C.L.R. (2d)
32 273 (B.C.C.A.)
33
34
35

36 13. This approach should be compared with this Court's 37
38 interpretation of the Canadian Bill of Rights. This Court
39
40 has held that the "existence of any forms of prohibited
41
42 discrimination is not a sine qua non of the operation of s.
43
44 1 of the Bill of Rights": The Queen v. Burnshine, [1975] 1 45
46
47

1 S.C.R. 693 @ 700; and see also: Beauregard v. Canada (1986),
2
3 70 N.R. 1 @ 57 (S.C.C.). In no case however has the Supreme 4
5 Court invalidated a law which involved a non-prohibited
6
7 ground. Nor has the Court ever said that the list of 8
9 potentially discriminatory grounds is infinite. However,
10
11 even if s. 1(b) of the Canadian Bill of Rights could be 12
13 violated by a legislative classification that was not 14
15 similar to the prohibited grounds of discrimination, that 16
17 would be due to the text of s. 1 of the Canadian Bill of 18
19 Rights which is very different from s. 15 of the Charter.
20
21 It will be noticed that the prohibited grounds of 22
23 discrimination in the Canadian Bill of Rights are 24
25 set out in the opening paragraph of s. 1 which purports to 26
27 qualify all of the rights and freedoms set out in 28
29 subsections 1(a) to 1 (f). It is understandable, therefore,
30
31 that the existence of the prohibited grounds of 32
33 discrimination could not be a sine qua non to a violation of 34
35 s. 1(b) of the Canadian Bill of Rights because that would 36
37 mean that these prohibited grounds would have to be a sine
38
39 qua non to a violation of ss. 1(a), (due process), 1(c), 40
41 (freedom of religion), 1(d), (freedom of speech), 1(e),
42
43 (freedom of assembly and association) and 1(f), (freedom of 44
45 the press). That would make no sense at all.
46
47

1 14. It is submitted that a different approach to s. 15
2 of the Charter is also justified because of the 3 fundamentally different nature of the Charter and the 4 Canadian Bill of Rights. The Charter, unlike the Canadian
5 Bill of Rights, not only applies to all levels of government
6 but is the supreme law of Canada. Inevitably the Charter
7 will require the Courts "to enter the legislative sphere":
8 Alberta Union of Provincial Employees, supra, @ 31, in a
9 manner never contemplated by the Canadian Bill of Rights.
10 However, it is submitted that this "intrusion into the field
11 of legislation": Alberta Union of Provincial Employees, 12 supra, @ 31, should only occur when expressly authorized by 13 the Constitution and not by any "implication": Alberta Union
14 of Provincial Employees, supra, @ 31. It is submitted that 15 to interpret s. 15 of the Charter as "open-ended" is not 16 only to "overshoot its purpose": R. v. Big M. Drug Mart,
17 supra, @ 344, but is also inconsistent with the "character
18 and the larger objects of the Charter itself": Big M. Drug
19 Mart, supra, @ 344, which is founded on the fact that 20 "Canadian society is to be free and democratic": R. v.
21 Oakes, [1986] 1 S.C.R. 103 @ 136 (emphasis added).
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

15. If every legislative classification is potentially

1 discriminatory then no distinction will exist between the
2
3 Court's legitimate function of scrutinizing legislation for 4
5 its constitutionality and its illegitimate function in a
6
7 democracy of scrutinizing the wisdom, policy or merits of 8
9 legislation viz its rationality, reasonableness or fairness:
10
11 see Reference Re S. 94(2) of the Motor Vehicle Act, [1986] 1
12
13 W.W.R. 481 @ 489-490 (S.C.C.).
14
15

16
17 16. If s. 15 scrutiny was triggered by any legislative 18
19 classification then the courts will inevitably and 20
21 continually be thrust into the "bog of legislative policy-
22
23 making": Curr v. The Queen, [1972] S.C.R. 889 @ 902. All 24
25 laws draw distinctions on the basis of who we are or what we 26
27 do. If the ultimate measure of equality is the rationality, 28
29 reasonableness or fairness of the legislative distinction, 30
31 then it will always be possible for someone to present a
32
33 reasonable argument (often at great length and expense) that 34
35 the Legislature would have acted rationally or reasonably or 36
37 fairly only if it had redrawn its legislative lines to 38
39 encompass or exclude certain individual or group of 40
41 individuals.
42
43

44
45 17. It is also very likely that these claims, even if 46
47

1 ultimately unsuccessful, will be frequently made. Anyone
2 who is charged pursuant to legislation and perhaps anyone
3 who seriously objects to the policy of an enactment will be 4 tempted to invoke s. 15:
5
6
7
8

9 "Section 15, like the 14th Amendment in the U.S.
10 Constitution will dwarf the other provisions of 11 the Charter and be the central issue in virtually
12 all Charter litigation. Laws which do not violate 13 any other fundamental right or freedom, will 14 almost always (if the U.S. experience is any 15 guide) be alleged to violate s. 15 because the 16 Legislature classified or failed to classify.
17 Even though legislation does not violate any other 18 sections, it will always be required to run the 19 gauntlet of s. 15 and s. 1. In my view, this 20 cannot have been the intention of the enactors of 21 the Charter."
22

23 Reference: Case, p. 100
24
25
26

27 18. Indeed, this prophecy is in the process of being 28 fulfilled. Section 15 has already spawned the kind of 29 litigation that is not infrequently brought under the 14th
30 Amendment of the U.S. Constitution. For example, the 31 following legislative classifications have been alleged to 32 be potentially discriminatory and thus violate the right to 33 equality:
34
35
36
37
38
39

- 40
41 (a) a law which distinguishes between persons who work in a
42 construction site of economic importance and those who 43 do not: B.C. & Yukon Territory Building & Construction
44
45
46
47

1            Council et al v. A.G.B.C. and Expo 86 Corporation et al
2
3            (1985), 66 B.C.L.R. 279 (B.C.S.C.);

- 4
5 (b) a law which distinguishes between persons who 6
7            manufacture softdrinks in steel cans rather than tin
8
9            cans: Aluminum Company of Canada Ltd. v. Her Majesty
10            the Queen and Dofasco Inc. (1986), 55 O.R. (2d) 522
11            (Ont.Div.Ct.); Cp. Minnesota v. Cloverleaf Creamery
12            Co., 449 US 596 (1986) where the challenge was to a law 13            which distinguished between persons who sell milk in 14            plastic containers rather than paper containers;
15
16 (c) a law which distinguishes between persons who are 17            resident in one electoral district but registered in 18            another and those who are not: Scott v. A.G.B.C.,
19            [1986] 5 W.W.R. 207 (B.C.S.C.); 20
21 (d) a law which distinguishes between persons who are 22            criminal lawyers rather than real estate lawyers: Beltz
23            v. Law Society of B.C. et al, [1981] 1 W.W.R. 527
24            (B.C.C.A.);
25
26 (e) a law which distinguishes between persons who have milk
27            quota and those who do not: Milk Board v. Clearview
28            Dairy Inc. (Unreported, B.C.C.A., March 4, 1987); 29
30 (f) a law which distinguishes between the taxpayer and the 31            tax assessor: Coast Tractor and Equipment Ltd. v. Allan
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

Council et al v. A.G.B.C. and Expo 86 Corporation et al
(1985), 66 B.C.L.R. 279 (B.C.S.C.);

- (b) a law which distinguishes between persons who manufacture softdrinks in steel cans rather than tin cans: Aluminum Company of Canada Ltd. v. Her Majesty the Queen and Dofasco Inc. (1986), 55 O.R. (2d) 522 (Ont.Div.Ct.); Cp. Minnesota v. Cloverleaf Creamery Co., 449 US 596 (1986) where the challenge was to a law which distinguished between persons who sell milk in plastic containers rather than paper containers;
- (c) a law which distinguishes between persons who are resident in one electoral district but registered in another and those who are not: Scott v. A.G.B.C., [1986] 5 W.W.R. 207 (B.C.S.C.);
- (d) a law which distinguishes between persons who are criminal lawyers rather than real estate lawyers: Beltz v. Law Society of B.C. et al, [1981] 1 W.W.R. 527 (B.C.C.A.);
- (e) a law which distinguishes between persons who have milk quota and those who do not: Milk Board v. Clearview Dairy Inc. (Unreported, B.C.C.A., March 4, 1987);
- (f) a law which distinguishes between the taxpayer and the tax assessor: Coast Tractor and Equipment Ltd. v. Allan

1 Halliday et al (Unreported, B.C.S.C., March 24, 1987);

2
3 and

4
5 (g) a law which distinguishes between persons who rent
6 residential premises that are government subsidized and 7 those who rent resident premises that are not
8 subsidized: A.G. of Newfoundland v. Newfoundland &
9 Labrador Housing Corp. (Unreported, Nfld. C.A., March 10 31, 1987)
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18

19 19. It is submitted that judicial review which is 20 directed solely to the rationality, reasonableness or 21 fairness of a legislative classification, where the 22 classification is not an enumerated ground or one similar 23 thereto, cannot be reconciled with democratic theory.
24
25 Dean John Hart Ely in Democracy & Distrust: A Theory of 26 Judicial Review (1980 @ 103), argues persuasively that in a
27 democracy judicial review should focus on the democratic 28 process to ensure that the process does not dysfunction
29 rather than on the outcomes of the process. A review of the 30 reasonableness of every impugned legislative criteria and 31 thus the outcome of the legislative process is not required
32 by the text of the Constitution. It should not be read in.
33
34 See also: Linde, "Due Process of Law Making" (1975)
35 55 Neb. L. Rev. 197 @ 254:
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

1 "As a Charter of government a Constitution must
 2 prescribe legitimate processes, not legitimate
 3 outcomes, if like ours (and unlike more
 4 ideological documents elsewhere) it is to serve
 5 many generations through changing times."
 6
 7
 8

9 20. Professor Patrick Monahan claims that "the 10 democratic conception" of judicial review propounded by Dean
 11 Ely and others in relation to the U.S. Constitution is even 12 more compelling in Canada. In "Judicial Review And 13 Democracy: A Theory of Judicial Review", (1987), 21 U.B.C.
 14 Law Rev. 87 @ 89-90 Professor Monahan states:
 15
 16
 17
 18
 19
 20

21 "The claim which I defend is premised on a
 22 distinction between the substantive outcomes of 23 the political process and the fairness of that 24 process itself. In my view, the judiciary should 25 not undertake the task of testing the substantive 26 outcomes of the political process against some 27 theory of the right or the good. The resolution
 28 of Charter issues is not to be found in the 29 philosophies of John Rawls, Robert Nozick or 30 Ronald Dworkin. Rather, the central focus of 31 judicial review should be on the integrity of the 32 political process itself. The judiciary should 33 interpret constitutional guarantees in such a way
 34 that the opportunities for public debate and 35 collective deliberation are enhanced. To put the 36 matter simply, constitutional adjudication should 37 be in the name of democracy, rather than right
 38 answers.
 39

40 Readers familiar with the American literature will 41 recognize the similarity between this argument
 42 and the work of John Hart Ely. ...
 43

44 My claim is that the representation - reinforcing
 45 theory of judicial review, although originally 46 formulated in the American context, actually 47

1 offers a far more convincing account of the
2 purposes underlying the Canadian Charter.
3

4 See also: Dickson, C.J., "The Democratic Character of the 5 Charter of Rights" in Law and Politics Of The 6 Judicial Process In Canada, (edited by 7 F.L. Morton, (1984) @ 325-327):
8

9 "In this regard I commend to you a statement by 10 the Committee on the Constitution of the Canadian 11 Bar Association:
12

13 'A democracy is the basis and prerequisite
14 for the operation of the supremacy of 15 Parliament. That being so, it would seem
16 justifiable to entrench in a constitution
17 principles which are prerequisites to the 18 existence of democracy. ...
19
20

21
22 21. A review of the rationality or reasonableness of 23 legislative classifications "leads courts and counsel into a 24 labyrinth of fictions:" Linde, supra, @ 207. Testing the 25 law for rationality creates intractable difficulties that
26 are intrinsic to the process of judicial review. Linde
27 summarizes these difficulties as follows:
28
29
30
31
32

33 "[T]he test depends on attributing a purpose to 34 the law maker; but laws are often an accommodation
35 of several unrelated purposes. Commonly, a law
36 will push toward a goal only within the limits of 37 objectives that may or may not be apparent in 38 retrospect. Legislative declarations and 39 legislative history cannot be relied on to reflect
40 the actual balance of considerations that shaped
41 the law, and often no such records are available.
42 Although proponents might have wished for more and 43 opponents for less, all that is certain about the 44 law as a means to an end is that a majority could 45 be found to undertake what the law in fact 46 undertakes, no more, no less. That much is its 47

1 immediate goal. If judicial review may hold a law
 2 invalid for failure to match some greater purpose,
 3 it places a premium on the manner in which the 4 counsel and court phrase the supposed legislative
 5 goals. Many of our laws simply reflect old
 6 notions of right and wrong, or sympathy toward the 7 equity of some particular claim to legislative 8 consideration, without intending to achieve any 9 pragmatic aim. Such a law may be unconstitutional
 10 if it pursues a goal that the Constitution
 11 forbids, but not because the values it reflects
 12 are merely sentimental, or parochial, or old
 13 fashioned, or foolish, rather than goal oriented.
 14 ... Finally, judicial review of rationality is 15 irretrievably ambivalent about time - whether to 16 match past facts to past purposes, or present
 17 facts to past purposes, or present facts to 18 present purposes - because it is ambivalent about 19 its premise, whether it means to review the one
 20 time reasonableness of lawmakers or the continuing 21 reasonableness of laws." (pp. 220 - 222).
 22

23
 24
 25 22. The comments of McIntyre, J. in Alberta Union of 26 Provincial Employees, supra, @ 30 are an equally apt
 27
 28 response to the claim that courts should review the 29
 30 rationality or reasonableness of all legislative 31
 32 classifications: "None of these issues is amenable to 33
 34 principled resolutions. There are no clearly correct
 35
 36 answers to these questions. They are of a nature peculiarly
 37
 38 apposite to the functions of the Legislature".
 39
 40

41
 42
 43 23. Furthermore, review of rationality involves 44
 45 important assumptions about the lawmaking process. Linde
 46
 47 asserts that "no courts should invalidate an act of

1 government for failure to comply with the constitutional
2 rule unless the rule is one with which the government should 3 have complied, or should know how to comply with in the 4 future" (p. 222). Linde suggests that if we were to take
5 the formula of rational law making seriously it would impose
6 on lawmakers demands which would involve an enormous
7 requirement of time and which bear no relation to the 8 reality of the lawmaking process: Linde, supra, @ pp. 222 -
9 224.
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20

21 24. It might be argued that this threshold test would 22 allow some entirely arbitrary and capricious laws to escape
23 s. 15 scrutiny. A law, e.g., which stipulate that "only
24 persons who drive red cars are entitled to a driver's 25 licence" would seem entirely arbitrary but the legislative 26 classification "those who drive red cars" is not similar to 27 an enumerated ground and thus would not potentially 28 discriminate. It is submitted, however, that it would be a
29 grave mistake for the Court to approach and interpret s. 15
30 on the assumption that such legislation would ever be 31 possible. It would not. Prior to the Charter the 32 Legislature did not act in such arbitrary fashion. There is 33 no reason to believe or assume that it would do so after the 34 Charter.
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

1
2 25. In Oakes, supra, @ 136, Dickson, C.J. stated that 3
4 when interpreting the Charter the "Court must be guided by 5
6 the values and principles essential to a free and democratic
7
8 society which I believe embody ... faith in social and 9
10 political institutions which enhance the participation of 11
12 individuals and groups in society". (emphasis added)
13
14

15 26. Dean Fly, (Democracy and Distrust, supra, @ 181-183, 16
17 responds to critics of his theory of constitutional
18
19 interpretation, which likewise leaves open the possibility 20
21 of arbitrary laws remaining unreviewable, such as those 22
23 which make it "a crime for any person to remove another
24
25 person's gall bladder, except to save that person's life" as 26
27 follows:
28
29

30 "It is an entirely legitimate response to the gall
31
32 bladder law to note that it couldn't pass and 33
34 refuse to play any further. In fact it can only 35
36 deform our constitutional jurisprudence to tailor
37
38 it to laws that couldn't be enacted, since
39
40 constitutional law appropriately exists for those 41
42 situations where representative government cannot 43
44 be trusted, not those where we know it can."
45
46
47

41 27. Professors Monahan and Petter in "Developments in 42
43 Constitutional Law: The 1985-86 Term" (to be published in 9
44
45 Supreme Court Law Review) ask the questions "are laws ever
46
47

1 'irrational'?" (p. 59) and answer as follows:

2 "Laws may be enacted for reasons we happen to
3 disagree with, but it seems implausible to suppose
4 that laws are enacted for no reason at all ... The 5 only real function of the rational basis test is 6 to make the judicial balancing of interests less
7 apparent and thus seemingly more legitimate."
8

9 And see: Felix Cohen, "Transcendental Nonsense and the 10 Functional Approach" (1930), 33 Columbia L.
11 Rev. 808 @ 819:
12

13 "Taken seriously this conception [of a rationality
14 standard] makes of our courts lunacy commissions
15 sitting in judgment upon the mental capacity of 16 legislators and, occasionally, of judicial 17 brethren."
18

19
20
21 28. It is also obvious that if any truly draconian
22
23 legislation was invoked the courts would be able to resort
24
25 to s. 7 of the Charter which protects certain fundamental 26
27 interests and s. 12 which is concerned primarily with 28
29 arbitrary measures.
30

31
32
33 29. A "reasonableness" or "fairness" test involves a
34
35 higher standard of scrutiny than a mere rationality test:
36
37 Case, p. 103. An inquiry into the reasonableness or 38
39 fairness of a legislative criteria also is patently and 40
41 overtly an inquiry into the wisdom or policy of the law and 42
43
44
45
46
47

1 perhaps more so than would be the case if the inquiry was
2 one of mere rationality. This higher level of scrutiny is 3 justifiable, however, only if s. 15 review is triggered by 4 laws that classify on the enumerated grounds or grounds akin
5 thereto. Furthermore, if s. 15 is so construed then it
6 makes sense to have a single test since all criteria which 7 trigger s. 15 scrutiny will fall within either the "suspect"
8 or "sensitive" category: Case, p. 105. This does not mean
9 that the application of the test will yield the same result
10 no matter what potentially discriminatory criteria is in 11 issue. It will always be easier to demonstrate the 12 unfairness or unreasonableness of a law which classifies on 13 the basis of race than it will when the criteria is age or 14 disability. See: City of Cleburne, Texas v. Cleburne Living
15 Centre, 87 L Ed 2d 313 @ 327-329 (1985) per Stevens, J.

16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32 30. Judicial review of legislative classifications based 33 on the enumerated grounds or grounds similar thereto is easy
34 to reconcile with democratic theory - it is required by the 35 text of the Constitution. There can be no question as to 36 the legitimacy of judicial review in this context even 37 though the ultimate test will inevitably be one of 38 reasonableness or fairness. Even if s. 15 did not expressly 39 enumerate these prohibited grounds, judicial review of such 40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

1 "suspect" or "sensitive" classifications can be reconciled
2
3 with democratic principles since such classifications may be 4
5 motivated by prejudice and "prejudice against discrete and 6
7 insular minorities may be a special condition which tends to 8
9 curtail the operation of those political processes
10
11 ordinarily to be relied upon to protect minorities": The 12
13 United States v. Carolene Products Co., 304 US 144 @
14
15 152-153, fn. 4 (1938).
16
17
18

19 31. Dean Ely recognizes the legitimacy of judicial 20
21 review with respect to legislative classifications that are 22
23 "race-like" (Democracy and Distrust, supra, @ p. 149) which 24
25 includes classifications that relate to groups that "we know
26
27 to be the object of widespread vilification, groups we know
28
29 others (specifically those who control the legislative 30
31 process) might wish to injure": (id @ p. 153). Hence, Dean
32
33 Ely states that malfunctions in democratic process occur
34
35 when, inter alia:
36

37
38 "Though no one is actually denied a voice or a
39
40 vote, representatives beholden to an effective
41
42 majority are systematically disadvantaging some 43
44 minority out of simple hostility or a prejudiced
45
46 refusal to recognize commonalities of interest,
47
48 and thereby denying that minority the protection
49
50 afforded other groups by a representative
51
52 system." (@ p. 103).

1 32. Professor Hans A. Linde (as he then was), in
2
3 "Due Process of Lawmaking", supra, @ 201 - 203, argues that 4
5 the Equal Protection clause of the 14th Amendment should 6
7 allow for judicial review only with respect to "suspect
8
9 classifications" although he admits that there is "room for 10
11 debate about what the list of suspect classifications should 12
13 include." (p. 201) He describes the purpose of judicial 14
15 review with respect to such classifications as follows:
16

17 "For what is it that 'suspect classifications' are 18 suspected of? The suspicion, in that phrase, is 19 suspicion of prejudice - not simply prejudgment
20 based on ignorance and mistaken notions of fact,
21 but invidious prejudgment, grounded in notions of 22 superiority and inferiority, in beliefs about 23 relative worth, attitudes that deny the premise of 24 human equality and that will not be readily
25 sacrificed to mere facts. The suspicion of 26 prejudice focuses on the lawmaker's sense of 27 values, not on his rationality." (p. 201).
28
29
30

31 33. Professor Monahan is of the view that "the norm of 32 equality is designed to take account of the fact that 33 certain groups and individuals possess unequal access to the 34 political system.": Monahan, supra, @ 149. Although this 35 concept is different from the concept of prejudice that Dean
36 Ely espouses and which Professor Monahan criticizes, it
37
38 nevertheless is consistent with the submission that s. 15 is 39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

1 only triggered by laws which classify on the enumerated
2 grounds or grounds similar thereto.
3

4 34. It is submitted that whether a particular
5 legislative classification is akin to one of the enumerated
6 grounds must be determined on a case-by-case basis. The 7 common underlying factors of the enumerated grounds are that
8 they refer to human characteristics that are essentially 9 immutable, to groups which have been subject to a history of 10 prejudice and have directly and perhaps systemmically been 11 denied an equal voice in and equal access to the political 12 process. The approach must at all times be a "generous
13 rather than a legalistic one": R. v. Big M. Drug Mart Ltd., 14 supra, @ 344.
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27

28 35. Applying these criteria and employing a generous
29 interpretation to s. 15 of the Charter, it is conceded that 30 "citizenship" is a classification that triggers s. 15
31 scrutiny. Although not an immutable characteristic it is 32 one, like religion, that may be difficult to change without 33 fundamentally altering one's sense of identity; it might 34 conceivably be used by a government as a colourable means of 35 discriminating against persons on the basis of race or 36 national origin; since citizenship is a precondition of 37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

1 voting in both levels of government, non-citizens therefore
2
3 have no formal access to the political process.
4

5 Reference: Case, pp. 104-105
6

7 See also: B.C.T.F. et al v. A.G.B.C. et al, supra @ 535
8
9

10
11 36. The ultimate question, therefore, is whether the 12 classification of citizenship is in fact and in law
13 discriminatory which in turn depends on whether it is 14
15 "unfair or unreasonable, having regard to the purposes of 16
17 the legislation and its effects on the individual": Case, 18
19 p. 105.
20
21
22
23
24

25 37. The Appellant, the Attorney General of British
26 Columbia, adopts the submissions of the Appellant, the Law
27 Society of British Columbia, in paragraphs 13-14 of its 28
29 Factum.
30
31
32

33
34
35 38. While the prerequisites for citizenship may well
36 describe minimum qualities and commitments that can 37 reasonably be expected of a lawyer, it is the fact of being 38
39 a citizen which is the important requirement in s. 42.
40
41
42
43 Citizenship is more than the "sum of its parts". It is a
44
45 very special status. It is an important badge with 46
47 identifies members of the Canadian polity. It signifies

1 that a person is entitled to govern or at least play a
2 important role in the structures or processes of government,
3 broadly defined. In Sugarman v. Dougall, 413 US 34, 37 L Ed
4
5 2d 853, 93 S Ct 2842 (1973), Rehnquist, J. (dissenting)
6
7 states at 866 and 870:
8

9
10 "Citizenship meant something, a status in and 11 relationship with a society which is
12 continuing and more basic than mere presence
13 or residence. ... If citizenship is not
14 'special', the Court has wasted a great deal
15 of effort in the past."
16
17
18
19

20 And in Foley v. Connelie, 435 US 291, 55 L Ed 2d 287, 98
21
22 S Ct 1066 (1978), Burger, C.J. for the Court states at 23
24 55 L Ed 292:
25

26 "The act of becoming a citizen is more than a 27 ritual with no content beyond the fanfare of 28 ceremony. A new citizen has become a member
29 of a Nation, part of a people distinct from 30 others. ... The individual, at that point, 31 belongs to the polity and is entitled to 32 participate in the processes of democratic 33 decision-making. ... This is not intended to 34 denigrate the valuable contribution of aliens
35 ... It is no more than recognition of the fact
36 that a democratic society is ruled by its 37 people."
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

1 39. The Constitution itself recognizes and draws a
2
3 distinction between citizens and non-citizens: s. 3 and s. 6
4
5 of the Constitution Act, 1982
6
7

8
9 40. The rationale of the citizenship requirement can 10
11 therefore be described by reference to the following 12
13 syllogism which was referred to by the Court of Appeal, 14
15 Case, @ 108:
16

- 17 (a) persons who are involved in the processes or structures
18
19 of government, broadly defined, should be citizens;
20
21 (b) lawyers are involved in the processes or structures of 22
23 government;
24
25 (c) lawyers, therefore, should be citizens.
26
27

28
29 41. The Court of Appeal accepted the soundness of the 30
31 first premise:
32

33 "The requirement that only citizens be allowed to 34
35 participate in the structures or processes of 36
37 government is common in free and democratic 38
39 societies. Aristotle defined a citizen as 'a man
40
41 who shares in the administration of justice and 42
43 the holding of office': Politics (Transl. E.
44
45 Barker, Oxford Press 1948, Book 3, Chap. 1, 46
47 107-109), Case, p. 109

42 See also: D.F. Thompson, The Democratic Citizen, 43
44 (Cambridge U. Press, 1970 @ 30):
45
46
47

1 "To say that a system is democratic is to imply
2 not only that the system is responsive to the 3 interests of most of the citizens but also that 4 the citizens share in governing (if only by 5 selecting in a competitive system who shall govern
6 between elections)."

7
8
9 42. The Court of Appeal also recognized that "it is this 10 rationale which underlies the common requirement that 11 legislators, voters, judges, police and senior civil 12 servants be citizens": Case, p. 109.
13
14
15
16

17
18
19 43. The United States Supreme Court has recognized the 20 validity of the citizenship requirement when imposed on 21 persons involved in "governmental" or "political"
22 functions. In Ambach v. Norwick, 441 US 68, 60 L Ed 2d 49,
23 99 S Ct 1589 (1979), Powell, J. stated for the Court at 60
24
25
26
27
28
29 L Ed 2d 55:
30

31 "The rule for governmental functions, which is 32 an exception to the general standard
33 applicable to classifications based on
34 alienage, rests on important principles
35 inherent in the Constitution. The distinction
36 between citizens and aliens, though ordinarily 37 irrelevant to private activity, is fundamental 38 to the definition and government of the 39 state. The Constitution itself refers to the 40 distinction no less than 11 times ...
41 indicating that the status of citizenship was 42 meant to have significance in the structure of 43 our government. The assumption of that 44 status, whether by birth or naturalization,
45 denotes an association with the polity which,
46
47

1 in a democratic republic exercises the powers of
2 governance. ... The form of this association is 3 important: an oath of allegiance or similar
4 ceremony cannot substitute for the unequivocal
5 legal bond citizenship represents."
6
7

8 44. It is submitted that the Court of Appeal erred in 9 failing to hold that the Legislature could reasonably, and 10 fairly conclude that lawyers are involved in the processes
11 or structures of government, broadly defined, so as to 12 justify the citizenship requirement.
13
14
15
16
17
18
19

20 45. It is submitted that the Court of Appeal did not 21 attach sufficient weight and importance to the "dangerous
22 powers" and "solemn duties" of the lawyer in British 23 Columbia. It is submitted that the lawyer plays a vital 24 role in the administration of law and justice and is,
25 therefore, just as much a part of the governmental
26 structures or processes as are judges, jurors, legislators,
27 voters, civil servants and policemen: See, e.g. Provincial 28 Court Act, R.S.B.C. 1979, c. 341, s. 5; Jury Act, R.S.B.C.
29 1979, c. 210, s. 3(1)(a); Police Act, R.S.B.C. 1979, c. 331,
30 s. 12(5) as amended by the Charter of Rights Amendment Act,
31 1985, S.B.C. 1985, c. 60, s. 105; Constitution Act,
32 R.S.B.C. 1979, c. 62, s. 30; Election Act, R.S.B.C. 1979,
33 c. 103, s. 2(1)(a) as amended by Election Amendment
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

1 Act, 1984, S.B.C. 1984, c. 4, s. 2; Public Service Act,
2
3 R.S.B.C. 1979. Indeed, in the United States even teachers
4
5 are so regarded: Ambach v. Norwick, 441 US 68, 60 L Ed 2d
6
7 49, 99 S Ct 1589 (1979).
8
9

10
11 46. In Orkin, Legal Ethics, (1957) p. 17, the learned 12
13 author states:
14

15 "The lawyer, however, is more than a private 16 citizen and may be taken to occupy a quasi-
17 official position. He is and has always been 18 considered as being almost a public servant;
19 thus Yates, J. in Mayor of Norwich v. Bray, 20 [(1767), 4 Burr. 2109 @ 2115] said:
21

22 'The Court must have ministers; the 23 attorneys are its ministers.'
24
25

26
27 47. It is submitted that the enactment of the 28
29 Constitution Act, 1982 also enhances the role and importance
30
31 of lawyers in Canadian society. The lawyer plays a critical
32
33 function, second only in importance to the judges, in 34
35 interpreting and applying the Constitution, which in turn
36
37 will have profound implications for all Canadians.
38
39

40
41 48. The Charter itself recognizes the special place that 42
43 lawyers have in Canadian society by guaranteeing a right to 44
45 retain and instruct counsel in certain circumstances.
46
47

1 49. Similarly, the concept of privileged communications
2
3 between a solicitor and his client "has long been recognized
4
5 as fundamental to the due administration of justice":

6
7 Solosky v. Government of Canada, [1980] 1 S.C.R. 821 @ 833.
8
9

10
11 50. It is submitted that the Court of Appeal also erred
12
13 in substituting its judgment for that of the Legislature as 14
15 to the proper definition of the political community. In 16
17 Sugarman v. Dougall, 413 US 34, 37 L Ed 2d 853, 93 S Ct 2842
18
19 (1973) @ 37 L Ed 2d 860 the United States Supreme Court
20
21 recognized "the State's broad power to define its political 22
23 community".
24
25

26
27 51. It is submitted that the Court of Appeal erred in 28
29 saying that:
30

31 "The Legislature was not defining its political 32 community by imposing a requirement of citizenship
33 on lawyers in s. 42 of the Barristers and 34 Solicitors Act. Nothing is said in that section
35 about the role lawyers play in governmental 36 processes. Nor can we assume that it was the 37 premise upon which the citizenship requirement was 38 founded." : Case, p. 112
39
40

41
42 52. It is submitted that if the Court was of the view
43
44 that the citizenship requirement would be valid, if it was 45
46
47

1 founded on the Legislature's judgment that lawyers are 2 important players in the structures and processes of 3 government, then the Court of Appeal should have attributed
4 that rationale to the Legislature notwithstanding that
5 "nothing is said in [s. 42 of the Barristers and Solicitors
6 Act] about the role lawyers play in governmental
7 processes". Legislation should be assumed to have a
8 constitutionally valid rationale.
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18

19 53. It is submitted that the Legislature in enacting
20 the Charter of Rights Amendment Act, 1985, S.B.C. 1985, 21 c. 68, eliminating as mandatory the requirement of 22 citizenship as previously existed in the Barber Act, the 23 Engineer Act, the Forest Act, the Forester Act, and the 24 Optomistrist Act while at the same time maintaining that 25 requirement for judges, jurors, police, legislators, voters,
26 civil servants and lawyers in the Province of British
27 Columbia demonstrates that the purpose of the citizenship
28 requirement in all of the statutes in which it is now found
29 is to identify persons who play an important role in the 30 governmental process. It is also significant that the 31 citizenship requirement has been imposed by the 32 Legislature, rather than the Law Society, thus underlining
33 its purpose as defining the political community.
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

1 54. The requirement that lawyers be citizens is surely
2
3 more relevant in Canadian society today than the very common
4
5 and presumably reasonable requirement that a lawyer be a
6
7 British subject, which previously existed in British 8
9 Columbia and still exists in other Provinces.
10

11
12
13 55. It is submitted that the following comments of 14
15 learned Trial Judge are apt:

16
17 "I think it understandable in Canada, which is 18 both a country based, as the preamble to our 19 Charter emphasizes, on the rule of law and a
20 federal state in which the courts must review
21 the work of the elected legislators, that there
22 should be a desire that those engaged in the legal 23 process be themselves citizens. I think it
24 rational and reasonable that such a requirement
25 should extend to all whose work is essential to 26 the operation of the system: lawyers, jurors and 27 judges alike.": Case, p. 81
28
29

30
31 56. In conclusion, therefore, it is submitted that the 32
33 citizenship requirement in s. 42 of the Barristers and 34
35 Solicitors Act is reasonable and fair and thus does not 36
37 violate the provisions of s. 15 of the Charter. It is,
38
39 therefore, unnecessary to rely on s. 1 of the Charter as a
40
41 justification for s. 42 of the Barristers and Solicitors
42
43
44
45
46
47

1 Act. Were it necessary, the Attorney General submits that
2
3 the Province has a legitimate interest in defining its 4
5 political community to include the legal profession and that 6
7 distinguishing members of the polity by reference to 8
9 "citizenship" is a reasonable and proportionate means of 10
11 attaining this objective.

12
13 Reference: Oakes v. The Queen, supra, @ 135
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

PART IV

NATURE OF ORDER SOUGHT

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

1. That the appeal be allowed and the Order of the British Columbia Court of Appeal set aside and the Petition of the Petitioner be dismissed.

ALL OF WHICH IS RESPECTFULLY SUBMITTED

_____
JOSEPH J. ARVAY, ESQ.
Counsel for the Appellant, the
Attorney General of British Columbia

DATED: this 11th day of May, 1987
Victoria, British Columbia

PART VLIST OF AUTHORITIES

	PAGE NO(S)
1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

	PAGE NO(S)
1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

	PAGE NO(S)
1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47	