PART V – TABLE OF AUTHORITIES ..... 11

PART VI – STATUTORY PROVISIONS ..... 15

PART I - OVERVIEW

1. The Court's decision in this case will have a profound impact. It will influence whether friends, family, and good Samaritans will be willing to risk criminal prosecution for their humanitarian efforts to assist those fleeing persecution. It will also determine if refugees will be exposed to a greater risk of being returned to persecution for having assisted others to reach safety. If this Court interprets "people smuggling" to include those who assist others in fleeing persecution for no financial or other material gain, their inadmissibility and/or criminalization will act as a powerful deterrent to assisting refugees. Ironically, such an expansive interpretation might increase the likelihood that exploitative smugglers become the only option for desperate people fleeing persecution.
2. In fleeing persecution, refugees may incidentally assist others in their collective flight. Other individuals also help refugees for humanitarian reasons. These appeals raise two important questions: whether such actions should render refugee claimants inadmissible to Canada, thereby barring them from protection under the Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees<sup>1</sup> (Refugee Convention); and whether assisting refugees for reasons other than financial or other material gain should constitute an offence. Amnesty International respectfully urges these questions be answered in the negative.
3. Sections 37(1)(b) and 117 of the Immigration and Refugee Protection Act<sup>2</sup> (IRPA) must be interpreted in accordance with Canada's international legal obligations under the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime<sup>3</sup> (CATOC), the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air<sup>4</sup> (Protocol), and the Refugee Convention. An interpretation that fails to distinguish between refugees and those who assist them in reaching safety for no financial or other material gain, and smugglers who exploit and profit from this human suffering, is inconsistent with international law. Such an interpretation has severe consequences: it denies refugees the ability to seek and enjoy asylum by penalizing them for having assisted others in fleeing persecution, and exposes them to a risk of refoulement and expulsion. Such an interpretation goes against the object and purpose of the Refugee Convention, the Protocol, the IRPA and this Court's jurisprudence.<sup>5</sup>

PART II – QUESTION IN ISSUE

4. How should “people smuggling” and “human smuggling” in sections 37(1)(b) and 117 of the IRPA be interpreted in light of Canada's international human rights obligations?

PART III - ARGUMENT

A. Domestic legislation such as the IRPA must be interpreted and applied in conformity with international human rights law

5. Canada has long recognized that the values and principles enshrined in its international legal obligations are “relevant and persuasive” sources of law for the purpose of interpreting domestic statutes.<sup>6</sup> Absent express, unequivocal, contrary legislative intent, this Court has applied a presumption of conformity, requiring domestic law to be interpreted so as to avoid violations of Canada's international law obligations.<sup>7</sup>
6. Canada's obligations under international human rights law come from a variety of sources. They are set out in binding treaties that Canada has ratified or acceded to, including the Refugee Convention, the CATOC, and the Protocol.
7. Those obligations are also found in the principles of customary international law which form part of Canadian common law.<sup>8</sup> Also relevant are the views of the United Nations (UN) treaty bodies and agencies charged with reviewing the implementation of treaties, such as the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), the UN Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), and the UN Human Rights Committee. Canadian courts have relied on these bodies in determining the content and scope of Canada's international obligations.<sup>9</sup>

<sup>5</sup> Ezokola v Canada (Citizenship and Immigration), 2013 SCC 40 at paras 32, 68, [2013] 2 SCR 678 [Ezokola], (Amnesty International Book of Authorities (hereinafter “AI BOA”), Tab 5); Pushpanathan v Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration), [1998] 1 SCR 982 at para 57, 150 DLR (4th) [Pushpanathan], (AI BOA, Tab 7).

<sup>6</sup> Reference re Public Service Employee Relations Act (Alberta), [1987] 1 SCR 313 at 348-350, 38 DLR (4th) 161 (per Dickson CJ, dissenting on other grounds) (AI BOA, Tab 10); R v Hape, [2007] 2 SCR 292 at paras 35-39, 53-56, 280 DLR (4th) 385 [Hape] (AI BOA, Tab 8); Divito v Canada (Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness), 2013 SCC 47 at paras 22-28, [2013] 3 SCR 157 [Divito] (AI BOA, Tab 4); R v Sharpe, 2001 SCC 2 at paras 175-176, [2001] 1 SCR 45, (AI BOA Tab, 9).

<sup>9</sup> The views of the UNHCR have assisted this Court in several cases, e.g. Ezokola, supra note 5 at paras 35, 76-77 (AI BOA, Tab 5); Divito, supra note 6 at para 26, (AI BOA, Tab 4); Canada (Attorney General) v Ward, [1993] 2 SCR 689 at 713-714, 103 DLR (4th) 1, (AI BOA, Tab 1); Chan v Canada (Minister of Employment and Immigration), [1995] 3 SCR 593 at paras 46-48, 54, 56-58, 72, 74-75, 92, 128 DLR (4th) 213, (AI BOA, Tab 2); Pushpanathan, supra note 5 at paras 53-54, 61-62, 68, (AI BOA, Tab 7).

8. These international commitments and principles of customary international law are legally binding on Canada.<sup>10</sup> Moreover, Parliament affirmed its intention to abide by Canada's international commitments in section 3(3)(f) of the IRPA, which provides: "This Act is to be construed and applied in a manner that [...] complies with international human rights instruments to which Canada is signatory."<sup>11</sup>

B. The dual purpose of the CATOC and the Protocol must be reflected in the interpretation of sections 37(1)(b) and 117 of the *IRPA

9. The CATOC and the Protocol are products of careful negotiations between States Parties and an Inter-Agency Group comprised of the UNHCR, the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, the International Organization for Migration, and UNICEF, which wanted to ensure that in addressing people smuggling, the vulnerabilities of smuggled persons was recognized, and the protection of their human rights guaranteed.<sup>12</sup>

10. The resulting CATOC and Protocol aim to achieve two complementary goals: combatting transnational organized crime, including people smuggling, while protecting the human rights of smuggled persons. Article 2 of the Protocol explicitly states that its dual purpose is "[t]o prevent and combat the smuggling of migrants [...] while protecting the rights of smuggled migrants."<sup>13</sup> Accordingly, the CATOC and the Protocol contain a number of Articles requiring States Parties to criminalize transnational organized crime, including people smuggling,<sup>14</sup> and provisions to protect and assist smuggled persons rather than impose penalties for their manner of arrival.<sup>15</sup> The obligation to protect smuggled persons "reinforces a notion that smuggled people are also victims of human rights abuses, and [...] has the effect of redirecting smuggling into a human rights discourse."<sup>16</sup>

11. Article 19 of the Protocol emphasizes States Parties' obligations towards refugees:

Nothing in this Protocol shall affect the other rights, obligations and responsibilities of States and individuals under international law, including international humanitarian law and international human rights law and, in particular, where applicable, the 1951

Convention and the 1967 Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees and the principle of non-refoulement as contained therein.<sup>17</sup>

12. The interpretation of people smuggling and human smuggling under sections 37(1)(b) and 117 of the IRPA must conform to Canada's international human rights obligations. Fulfilling the dual purpose of combatting people smuggling and protecting human rights requires States Parties to adopt a definition of smuggling that clearly distinguishes between persons, including refugees, who assist others to reach safety for no financial or other material gain, and smugglers who profit from human suffering. According to the UNODC<sup>18</sup>, it was the intention of the drafters that the sanctions established in accordance with the Protocol should apply to the smuggling of migrants by organized criminal groups and not to mere migration of migrants, even in cases where it involves entry or residence that is illegal under the laws of the State concerned.<sup>19</sup>
13. The international community has recognized that in seeking asylum, individuals might need to resort to unlawful acts. Professor Sharon Pickering notes that "most asylum-seekers require smugglers at some, if not all, stages of their journey[.]"<sup>20</sup> Further, the UNODC emphasizes that "the criminal smuggling of migrants may involve the movement of legitimate refugees or asylum-seekers."<sup>21</sup> The complex relationship between asylum-seeking and smuggling requires States Parties to adopt a definition of people smuggling that ensures the protection of refugees.
14. To distinguish smugglers from refugees, and to ensure protection for those legitimately in need of it, the international definition of people smuggling requires (a) the intentional procurement of illegal entry, in order to (b) obtain a financial or other material benefit.<sup>22</sup> The Protocol does not "criminalize altruistic or charitable groups who smuggle people for purposes other than financial or other material gain."<sup>23</sup> Thus, the exploitative purpose behind assisting individuals to cross borders illegally is central to the definition of people smuggling.

15. By requiring financial or material profit as a defining feature of people smuggling, the drafters intended “to include the activities of organized criminal groups acting for profit, but to exclude the activities of those who provided support to migrants for humanitarian reasons or on the basis of close family ties.”<sup>24</sup> Professor Andreas Schloenhardt and Hadley Hickson add that the Protocol “appears to preclude states parties from criminalizing smuggled migrants who, directly or indirectly, assist in their own smuggling journey.”<sup>25</sup> Thus, individuals whose primary purpose is to seek protection should also not be penalized for assisting others while collectively fleeing persecution. An interpretation of sections 37(1)(b) and 117 of the IRPA that allows for the prosecution and penalization of family, friends, humanitarian workers, and refugees themselves for aiding other refugees will discourage people from assisting refugees. Ironically, this will reduce the options available to people fleeing persecution, and increase the demand for criminal smuggling. Such an outcome undermines both the Protocol and the Refugee Convention.

C. Canada’s obligations under the CATOC, the Protocol, and the Refugee Convention must all be given full effect

16. The universal principle of pacta sunt servanda<sup>26</sup> set out in the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties (VCLT) – which codifies customary international law<sup>27</sup> – provides that Canada’s obligations under the CATOC, the Protocol, and the Refugee Convention must all be given full effect. Article 31(1) of the VCLT further requires treaties to be “interpreted in good faith in accordance with the ordinary meaning to be given to the terms of the treaty in their context and in light of its object and purpose.”<sup>28</sup> The duty of good faith requires States to refrain from acts that have “the overall effect of rendering the fulfilment of treaty obligations obsolete, or defeat the object and purpose of a treaty.”<sup>29</sup> According to the International Law Commission, “[w]hen a treaty is open to two interpretations one of which does and the other does not enable the treaty to have appropriate effects, good faith and the objects and purposes of the treaty demand that the former interpretation should be adopted.”<sup>30</sup> Where norms appear to conflict, “they should, to the extent possible, be interpreted so as to give rise to a single set of compatible obligations.”<sup>31</sup>

17. Thus, while Article 34(3) of the CATOC permits States Parties to “adopt more strict or severe measures [...] for preventing and combating transnational organized crime[.]”<sup>32</sup> the UN General Assembly, the UNODC, and the European Court of Human Rights have all stated that such measures cannot be undertaken at the expense of States Parties’ human rights obligations, which must be given full effect.<sup>33</sup> As in the United Kingdom, any laws imposing penalties on smuggling should be accompanied by exemptions for refugees and those who assist them for reasons other than profit or other material gain.<sup>34</sup> As noted by Professor Anne Gallagher and Fiona David, while the human rights guaranteed in Article 19 of the Protocol may appear to collide with efforts to combat people smuggling, the correct outcome has been clearly articulated: a State that acts against the letter or spirit of international law, including international refugee law, in implementing its obligations under the Migrant Smuggling Protocol is in violation of one of [the latter’s] central provisions.<sup>35</sup>

D. The human rights consequences of interpreting people smuggling to include refugees and those who assist refugees amount to violations of international refugee law

18. While States have sovereign control over their borders, they also have binding legal obligations towards refugees and asylum-seekers. Gallagher and David note, “the entitlement of a State to control the entry of aliens into its territory must be filtered through the lens of international rules that the State has in one way or another agreed to.”<sup>36</sup> In ratifying the Refugee Convention, States Parties crafted a careful compromise, carving out a category of individuals to which they committed to provide legal status and protection. As noted by the House of Lords, the Refugee Convention represented a compromise between competing interests, in this case between the need to ensure humane treatment of the victims of oppression on the one hand and the wish of sovereign states to maintain control over those seeking entry to their territory on the other.<sup>37</sup>

According to Hathaway, that compromise “was to refrain from challenging the right of states to control most immigration, but to require governments to ensure that refugees are not caught by exclusionary rules.”<sup>38</sup>

19. States Parties to the Refugee Convention must pay special attention “to situations where the system of administration may produce results incompatible with the applicable principle or standard of international law.”<sup>39</sup> The consequences of a section 37(1)(b) inadmissibility finding are severe. They constitute a penalty on refugees for having assisted others in fleeing persecution, and expose them to a risk of refoulement and expulsion.<sup>40</sup>
20. Refugee claimants found to be inadmissible to Canada for people smuggling are permanently barred from accessing protection under the Refugee Convention and section 96 of the IRPA. They are issued a mandatory deportation order and receive no statutory stay of removal pending judicial review.<sup>41</sup> The only recourse to protection is a Pre-Removal Risk Assessment (PRRA) during which refugees are not entitled to a hearing as required by this Court in Singh v. Minister of Employment and Immigration,<sup>42</sup> nor to have the risks they face upon removal assessed on the basis of the persecution factors set out in the Refugee Convention and section 96 of the IRPA.<sup>43</sup> Therefore, a person with a well-founded fear of persecution for any of the grounds enumerated in section 96 will not receive refugee protection, including protection from expulsion or refoulement to persecution or other serious human rights violations.<sup>44</sup> A positive PRRA does not result in refugee protection but rather a stay of removal, which can be cancelled at the discretion of the Minister of Citizenship and Immigration if he or she is of the opinion the circumstances surrounding the stay have changed.<sup>45</sup> Even where a danger of torture or other ill-treatment exists, under PRRA, refugee claimants are still exposed to expulsion or refoulement if it is determined that their actions were sufficiently severe or that they constitute a danger to Canada.<sup>46</sup>

21. As with a section 37(1)(b) finding of inadmissibility, the maximum penalty for human smuggling under section 117 renders the person ineligible to access refugee protection in Canada.<sup>47</sup>
22. An interpretation of people smuggling that exposes refugee claimants to a risk of refoulement and expulsion simply for having assisted others in fleeing persecution is a significant curtailment of rights, amounting to a penalty prohibited by Article 31 of the Refugee Convention.<sup>48</sup> The prohibition against penalizing refugees recognizes that in seeking asylum, refugees may need to enter countries of refuge irregularly.<sup>49</sup> Hathaway affirms the applicability of Article 31 to smuggled refugees:

So long as a refugee is seeking [...] access to protection, the incidental entry or presence of others arising from the same actions should be viewed simply as that: incidental to the primary and legally protected goal of ensuring that migration control laws do not impede a refugee from vindicating her or his rights under the Refugee Convention.<sup>50</sup>

23. According to Hathaway, “there is no sound basis to interpret the notion of a ‘penalty’ narrowly.”<sup>51</sup> Rather, the prohibition against penalization must be construed broadly in order to encompass any detriment to seeking asylum for reasons of illegal entry, including administrative sanctions.<sup>52</sup> The UNHCR has stressed that

[a]ny punitive measure, that is, any unnecessary limitation to the full enjoyment of rights granted to refugees under international refugee law, applied by States against refugees who would fall under the protective clause of Article 31(1) could, arguably, be interpreted as a penalty.<sup>53</sup>

24. The UNODC stated “it is essential that smuggled migrants who are in need of international protection are given a genuine opportunity to seek it.”<sup>54</sup> Similarly, the drafters of the Refugee Convention assumed “that governments would not exercise their authority to penalize those assisting refugees to enter an asylum country absent evidence that they had acted in an exploitative way, or otherwise in bad faith.”<sup>55</sup> Penalizing individuals for assisting refugees impedes refugees’ ability to exercise their rights under the Refugee Convention.<sup>56</sup> Much like “[a]s a matter of principle [...] a carrier should not be penalized for bringing in an ‘undocumented’ passenger, where that person is subsequently determined to be a refugee[,]”<sup>57</sup> States should refrain from penalizing individuals who help refugees flee persecution in a non-exploitative manner.
25. A treaty interpretation that defeats the object and purpose of that treaty undermines the VCLT’s good faith principle.<sup>58</sup> The Refugee Convention’s “overarching and clear human rights object and purpose[,]”<sup>59</sup> and the international community’s “profound concern for refugees”<sup>60</sup> and commitment to grant them the widest scope of protection possible – as this Court has recognized<sup>61</sup> – require sections 37(1)(b) and 117 to be interpreted to distinguish legitimate refugees and those who assist them in fleeing persecution, from organized criminals who profit from and exploit refugees.
26. It is often difficult to draw a clear line between smuggler and smuggled, for “smuggling can be both the cause and consequence of human rights violations.”<sup>62</sup> Professors David Kyle and Rey Koslowski add that “much migrant smuggling [...] operates in an ambiguous area that is neither purely voluntary nor involuntary from the perspective of the migrant.”<sup>63</sup> In other jurisdictions, scholars have drawn attention to the “often artificial distinction between passengers and crew”<sup>64</sup> in people smuggling.

27. For this reason, any blanket non-admission of all individuals assisting refugees to access protection should be rejected.<sup>65</sup> As stated by Hathaway, “[w]hen Canada single-mindedly demonizes all smuggling, it runs roughshod over [the] carefully crafted compromise”<sup>66</sup> that States Parties made by developing the Refugee Convention. Such an application of Canada’s inadmissibility and criminal provisions would be contrary not only to the object and purpose of the Refugee Convention,<sup>67</sup> but also the IRPA, which recognizes that Canada’s obligations towards refugees are “in the first instance about saving lives and offering protection.”<sup>68</sup> As stated by Gallagher and David, “[t]he international system of refugee protection is not reserved solely for the virtuous: it is only under exceptional circumstances that entitlement to seek and receive asylum from persecution may be preemptorily withheld.”<sup>69</sup>

Can TS 1969 No 6.*

Preamble

The high contracting parties,

Considering that the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights approved on 10 December 1948 by the General Assembly have affirmed the principle that human beings shall enjoy fundamental rights and freedoms without discrimination,

Considering that the United Nations has, on various occasions, manifested its profound concern for refugees and endeavoured to assure refugees the widest possible exercise of these fundamental rights and freedoms,

Considering that it is desirable to revise and consolidate previous international agreements relating to the status of refugees and to extend the scope of and protection accorded by such instruments by means of a new agreement,

Considering that the grant of asylum may place unduly heavy burdens on certain countries, and that a satisfactory solution of a problem of which the United Nations has recognized the international scope and nature cannot therefore be achieved without international co-operation,

Expressing the wish that all States, recognizing the social and humanitarian nature of the problem of refugees, will do everything within their power to prevent this problem from becoming a cause of tension between States,

Préambule

Les hautes parties contractantes,

Considérant que la Charte des Nations Unies et la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme approuvée le 10 décembre 1948 par l'Assemblée générale ont affirmé ce principe que les êtres humains, sans distinction, doivent jouir des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales,

Considérant que l'Organisation des Nations Unies a, à plusieurs reprises, manifesté la profonde sollicitude qu'elle éprouve pour les réfugiés et qu'elle s'est préoccupée d'assurer à ceux-ci l'exercice le plus large possible des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales,

Considérant qu'il est désirable de réviser et de codifier les accords internationaux antérieurs relatifs au statut des réfugiés et d'étendre l'application de ces instruments et la protection qu'ils constituent pour les réfugiés au moyen d'un nouvel accord,

Considérant qu'il peut résulter de l'octroi du droit d'asile des charges exceptionnellement lourdes pour certains pays et que la solution satisfaisante des problèmes dont l'Organisation des Nations Unies a reconnu la portée et le caractère internationaux, ne saurait, dans cette hypothèse, être obtenue sans une solidarité internationale,

Exprimant le vœu que tous les Etats, reconnaissant le caractère social et humanitaire du problème des réfugiés, fassent tout ce qui est en leur pouvoir pour éviter que ce problème ne devienne une cause de tension entre Etats,

Noting that the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees is charged with the task of supervising international conventions providing for the protection of refugees, and recognizing that the effective co-ordination of measures taken to deal with this problem will depend upon the co-operation of States with the High Commissioner,

have agreed as follows:

Article 1. Definition of the Term “Refugee”

A. For the purposes of the present Convention, the term “refugee” shall apply to any person who:

(2) ... owing to well-founded fear of being persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion, is outside the country of his nationality and is unable or, owing to such fear, is unwilling to avail himself of the protection of that country; or who, not having a nationality and being outside the country of his former habitual residence as a result of such events, is unable or, owing to such fear, is unwilling to return to it.

Prenant acte de ce que le Haut Commissaire des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés a pour tâche de veiller à l’application des conventions internationales qui assurent la protection des réfugiés, et reconnaissant que la coordination effective des mesures prises pour résoudre ce problème dépendra de la coopération des Etats avec le Haut Commissaire,

Sont convenues des dispositions ci-après :

Article premier. Définition du Terme “Réfugié”

A. Aux fins de la présente Convention, le terme “réfugié” s’appliquera à toute personne:

Article 31. Refugees Unlawfully in the Country of Refuge

1. The Contracting States shall not impose penalties, on account of their illegal entry or presence, on refugees who, coming directly from a territory where their life or freedom was threatened in the sense of article 1, enter or are present in their territory without authorization, provided they present themselves without delay to the authorities and show good cause for their illegal entry or presence.

Article 32. Expulsion

1. Les Etats Contractants n'expulseront un réfugié se trouvant régulièrement sur leur territoire que pour des raisons de sécurité nationale ou d'ordre public.

2. L'expulsion de ce réfugié n'aura lieu qu'en exécution d'une décision rendue conformément à la procédure prévue par la loi. Le réfugié devra, sauf si des raisons impérieuses de sécurité nationale s'y opposent, être admis à fournir des preuves tendant à le disculper, à présenter un recours et à se faire représenter à cet effet devant une autorité compétente ou devant une ou plusieurs personnes spécialement désignées par l'autorité compétente.

3. Les Etats Contractants accorderont à un tel réfugié un délai raisonnable pour lui permettre de chercher à se faire admettre régulièrement dans un autre pays. Les Etats Contractants peuvent appliquer, pendant ce délai, telle mesure d'ordre interne qu'ils jugeront opportune.

Article 33. Prohibition of Expulsion or Return (“Refoulement”)

1. No Contracting State shall expel or return (“refouler”) a refugee in any manner whatsoever to the frontiers of territories where his life or freedom would be threatened on account of his race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion.

1980 No 37.*

Preamble

The States Parties to the present Convention,

Considering the fundamental role of treaties in the history of international relations,

Recognizing the ever-increasing importance of treaties as a source of international law and as a means of developing peaceful cooperation among nations, whatever their constitutional and social systems,

Noting that the principles of free consent and of good faith and the pacta sunt servanda rule are universally recognized,

Affirming that disputes concerning treaties, like other international disputes, should be settled by peaceful means and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law,

Recalling the determination of the peoples of the United Nations to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties can be maintained,

Having in mind the principles of international law embodied in the Charter of the United Nations, such as the principles of the equal rights and self-determination of peoples, of the sovereign equality and independence of all States, of non-interference in the domestic affairs of States, of the prohibition of the threat or use of force and of universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all,

Préambule

Les Etats Parties à la présente Convention,

Considérant le rôle fondamental des traités dans l'histoire des relations internationales,

Reconnaissant l'importance de plus en plus grande des traités en tant que source du droit international et en tant que moyen de développer la coopération pacifique entre les nations, quels que soient leurs régimes constitutionnels et sociaux,

Constatant que les principes du libre consentement et de la bonne foi et la règle pacta sunt servanda sont universellement reconnus,

Affirmant que les différends concernant les traités doivent, comme les autres différends internationaux, être réglés par des moyens pacifiques et conformément aux principes de la justice et du droit international,

Rappelant la résolution des peuples des Nations Unies de créer les conditions nécessaires au maintien de la justice et du respect des obligations nées des traités,

Conscients des principes de droit international incorporés dans la Charte des Nations Unies, tels que les principes concernant l'égalité des droits des peuples et leur droit de disposer d'eux-mêmes, l'égalité souveraine et l'indépendance de tous les Etats, la non-ingérence dans les affaires intérieures des Etats, l'interdiction de la menace ou de l'emploi de la force et le respect universel et effectif des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales pour tous,

Believing that the codification and progressive development of the law of treaties achieved in the present Convention will promote the purposes of the United Nations set forth in the Charter, namely, the maintenance of international peace and security, the development of friendly relations and the achievement of cooperation among nations,

Affirming that the rules of customary international law will continue to govern questions not regulated by the provisions of the present Convention,

Have agreed as follows:

Article 26. “Pacta sunt servanda”

Every treaty in force is binding upon the parties to it and must be performed by them in good faith.

Article 27. Internal law and observances of treaties

A party may not invoke the provisions of its internal law as justification for its failure to perform a treaty. This rule is without prejudice to article 46.

Article 53. Treaties conflicting with a peremptory norm of general international law (“jus cogens”)

A treaty is void if, at the time of its conclusion, it conflicts with a peremptory norm of general international law. For the purposes of the present Convention, a peremptory norm of general international law is a norm accepted and recognized by the international community of States as a whole as a norm from which no derogation is permitted and which can be modified only by a subsequent norm of general international law having the same character.

Convaincus que la codification et le développement progressif du droit des traités réalisés dans la présente Convention serviront les buts des Nations Unies énoncés dans la Charte, qui sont de maintenir la paix et la sécurité internationales, de développer entre les nations des relations amicales et de réaliser la coopération internationale,

Affirmant que les règles du droit international coutumier continueront à régir les questions non réglées dans les dispositions de la présente Convention,

Sont convenus de ce qui suit:

Article 26. “Pacta sunt servanda”

Tout traité en vigueur lie les parties et doit être exécuté par elles de bonne foi.

Article 27. Droit interne et respect des traités

Une partie ne peut invoquer les dispositions de son droit interne comme justifiant la non-exécution d'un traité. Cette règle est sans préjudice de l'article 46.

Article 53. Traités en conflit avec une norme impérative du droit international général (“jus cogens”)

Est nul tout traité qui, au moment de sa conclusion, est en conflit avec une norme impérative du droit international général. Aux fins de la présente Convention, une norme impérative du droit international général est une norme acceptée et reconnue par la communauté internationale des Etats dans son ensemble en tant que norme à laquelle aucune dérogation n'est permise et qui ne peut être modifiée que par une nouvelle norme du droit international général ayant le même caractère.

Article 64. Emergence of a new peremptory norm of general international law (“jus cogens”)

If a new peremptory norm of general international law emerges, any existing treaty which is in conflict with that norm becomes void and terminates.

Article 71. Consequences of the invalidity of a treaty which conflicts with a peremptory norm of general international law

1. In the case of a treaty which is void under article 53 the parties shall:

(a) eliminate as far as possible the consequences of any act performed in reliance on any provision which conflicts with the peremptory norm of general international law; and

(b) bring their mutual relations into conformity with the peremptory norm of general international law

2. In the case of a treaty which becomes void and terminates under article 64, the termination of the treaty:

(a) releases the parties from any obligation further to perform the treaty;

(b) does not affect any right, obligation or legal situation of the parties created through the execution of the treaty prior to its termination, provided that those rights, obligations or situations may thereafter be maintained only to the extent that their maintenance is not in itself in conflict with the new peremptory norm of general international law.

Article 64. Survenance d’une nouvelle norme impérative du droit international général (“jus cogens”)

Si une nouvelle norme impérative du droit international général survient, tout traité existant qui est en conflit avec cette norme devient nul et prend fin.

Article 71. Conséquences de la nullité d’un traité en conflit avec une norme impérative du droit international général

1. Dans le cas d’un traité qui est nul en vertu de l’article 53, les parties sont tenues :

a) d’éliminer, dans la mesure du possible, les conséquences de tout acte accompli sur la base d’une disposition qui est en conflit avec la norme impérative du droit international général; et

b) de rendre leurs relations mutuelles conformes à la norme impérative du droit international général.

2. Dans le cas d’un traité qui devient nul et prend fin en vertu de l’article 64, la fin du traité :

a) libère les parties de l’obligation de continuer d’exécuter le traité;

b) ne porte atteinte à aucun droit, aucune obligation, ni aucune situation juridique des parties, créés par l’exécution du traité avant qu’il ait pris fin; toutefois, ces droits, obligations ou situations ne peuvent être maintenus par la suite que dans la mesure où leur maintien n’est pas en soi en conflit avec la nouvelle norme impérative du droit international général.
